BEFORE JUDGE KIMBALL

The paily March of the Army of the Unfortunates.

Some Were Vagrants and Some Had Used Too Much Liquor-The

There were more than two dozon pris ners in Judge Kimball's procession this morning, and only two of them were women. Court opened at 9:30 o'clock, and Nicholson had a complaint to make about tramps begging in Eckington. He had two victims, Alexander Starke and Edw. Kruder, young Germans, against whom he had a charge of vagrancy.

"Yesterday afternoon," said the officer, complaint was made that two tramps were begging from house to house, and these men answered the descriptions given of them. While I was looking for the men a lady called me and told me that two tramps had come to her house and detramps had come to her house and de-manded money. She gave them some money, because she was afraid of them." Scon afterward he met these men, and the lady thought they were the men who had been at her house.
"What did they say?"
"They are Germans, and claim to have come here from Baltimore."
"Your honor," added the officer, "tramps-ere coming in pretty thick now."

"We left Baltimore at 12 o'clock day before yesterday, and tramped here," said (ne of the men.
"Why did you come here?"
"Looking for work," answered one of them. "We have only been in this country a few months."
"And what about you?" the other man was asked.
"My statement is the same."
The men promised to leave here and return to Baltimore today, and were released.

leased.

A young man whose name was given as James Mitchell was in the procession because of his intemperate habits. He had been in court many times before, and he outderstood as well the effects of a sentence as he did, the effects of liquor.

"He was very drunk yesterday," said Sergt. Dunnigan, "and according to what the officers say he is frequently in that condition and is put in the station over night to sleep off the effects of what he drinks."

"When were you last arrested?" The last time I was in court," he an wered, "was in October." "October?" asked the judge, when he had ecovered from his surprise.

"Yes, sir; but I've been arrested once ince then for being drunk."

"Fifteen days."

About Drinking.

Lawyer Moss, the attorney from Anacostia, appeared in the next case, and he argued that his client, Harry Mosby, a colored man, was not drunk when he was The officer had said he was drunk and had to be helped in the wagon. It was the first time Harry had been arrested, and counsel thought he was probably excited and the officer thought he was drunk.

"But he was drunk," said Officer Trumbull, "and I could smell whisky on him."

"Do you drink?" the officer was asked.

"I do not," was his response.

"Then I am very glad to hear it," added counsel. Elnathan Meade and wife have conveyed

"And he should be commended for it," said the court. "Some of the officers do drink and there is no commendation for hem."
Lawyer Moss continuing made an effort Lawyer Moss continuing made an effort to tell of some of his own experiences, and said that until he became a lawyer he did not drink. "But," he added, "I would not bke to swear to what I might take now." "You had better be careful, Mr. Moss," said the judge, "or the court will have to give you a temperance lecture."

Mosby was fined $5 or fifteen days.

At a Revival.

In the next case Lawyer Peyton appeared to defend Godfrey Jones and George Hackerson, young colored men who were charg ed with having disturbed a revival meeting in the Seventh Baptist Church, near Rock creek, last night.

Jones, who was married in that church about a month ago, fell asleep in the meeting last night, although one of the church officials said they vere having an "excitir omclass said they vere having an "excitin' time" there.

"I was orderly in the church," said Jones, "but I was asleep."

"Do you sleep in an orderly manner?"

"I don't know.".

"Do you snore?"

"If i do, I don't know it."

When it became necessary to describe a When it became necessary to describe

"These church omeers," he said, are too thin-skinned, and if one coughs or sneezes in church he will be called to account." Judge Kimball commented on church disorders, and said he thought that persons who are disorderly in churches and street cars should be more severely punished than for common disorder on the streets. It took Judge Kimbail one hour to hear

It took Judge Kimball one hour to hear the evidence of five witnesses, make a speech and fine the defendants $10 or thirty days.

Mary Dwyer, a little old woman who has been figuring in police circles a number of years, was arraigned for vagrancy.

"I very reluctantly brought her here," said Sanitary Officer Frank. "She has been in every charitable institution in the city, but she will not remain in them. Her daughter will give her a good home, but she won't stay there."

"I believe this woman's mind is not right," remarked the judge.
"Don't you believe it," said Mary. "I ain't crazy,"

"Don't you believe it," said Mary. "I ain't crazy."
"I don't know what to do with her," said the judge.
"Give her six months twice a year," said Mr. Pugh. "It is about the best thing to do with her. She will be well cared for down there."

A sentence of six months was imposed.

Yearly Migrations. "These men work hard to keep out of work," remarked Mr. Pugh when seven white men and two colored ones appeared as vagrants. They were found in the Baltimore and Ohio sand house about 2 o'clock this morning. The sand is warm and the men found it a more comfortable place than out of doors or in barns.
"I'm on my way north from New Orleans," said one of the men.
"That's just the way with the tramps. In the fall they go south and in the spring they start north."

"And what are you doing here?" the judge asked another member of the party.
"I thought I let you go to leave town?"
"I did leave."
"But you returned, and now you will, have to go down."
He was given thirty days, as were five of his friends, and three of them were released to leave the city.
Laura Welch, a woman who has a fondness for liquor, told the court that she has the vertigo and headaches.

'My husband lives in St. Augustine, Fla., and he wants me to come down there and meet him."
"Will you go to Florida if I release you?"
"I will, indeed, and I'll give you my word as a lady that I'll go."

He was turned over to the board of guardians.

Edward Taylor's nervous condition was evidence of drunkenness, and Policeman Newkirk said he had been on a spree and had made a nuisance of himself.

"She keeps a house in Louse alley and supports him," said Policeman Roberts.

The officer told of how they had disturbed Ellen Ale's Mission.

They were sentenced to three months each in default of real estate security.

HIS LIFE WORK ENDED.

Death in China of Rev. Dr. Nathan Sites, a Well-Known Missionary. A letter was received in this city yester day announcing the death from fever at Foo Chow, China, on February 10, of Rev the Methodist Episcopal Church in China Mrs. Sites, the widow, has been living in this city for the past two years with her son, Prof. C. M. Lacey Sites, and her sis Ruth Marie Sites, who was sent out from this city by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, was with her father at the time of his death, and a letter from her brought the sad intelligence to his family in this city. The news was entirely unex-pected, as Dr. Sites had enjoyed vigorous health. He had, however, been engaged in conducting a series of meetings, and was attacked by the fever, which resulted in his death within a week.

The deceased was one of the best known representatives of the church in the foreign field. His first visit to China was made in 1861, when, accompanied by his wife, he went out in a sailing vessel. His continuity with the learning ways him the learning ways had the learning ways him the learning ways had the learning ways had th familiarity with the language gave him great influence with the natives, and his life work was one of great value. Mrs. Sites expected to go back to China next year., The two younger children are in this city attending school.

Industrial Schools and Labor. Prof. McAlister of Philadelphia lectured in the School of Ethics yesterday on 'The Relation of Industrial Schools to the Labor Problem." He gave a historical view of the industrial school and showed that nothing new had been introduced into industrial training in this century. The industrial training, he said, was included under four heads, industrial schools, trade schools, technical schools and manual training schools. In the last was to be sought the greatest aid to the solution of the labor question. The combined training of hand, head and eye would not only shorten the term of apprenticeship, but it would put the pupils trained into a position to make the most of their caportunities and bring their heads to the aid of their hands not only in their work, but in shaping the conditions under which they labored.

Prof. Hailmann led the discussion on the topic and talked on kindergarten training and ethical aims of Froebel in his schools. ing schools. In the last was to be sought

Death of Mr. James McDermott. Mr. James McDermott, of the firm of John McDermott & Bro., carriage builders died about 9:30 o'clock last evening at his residence, 313 Missouri avenue. Death was due to a kidney trouble, with which Mr. McDermott had been suffering since July last, and his demise was not unexpected. Mr. McDermott leaves a widow, but no children, his only child, Frank, having died two years ago. The funeral will be heid Saturday morning from St. Dominic's Church. Interment is to be made in Mount
